CEEKO

Ready to bring forth a new wave of inspiring, authentic music Australia has barely touched.

CEEKO is a South African-born artist that now calls Melbourne home. However, he draws inspiration from his roots, combining afro-beat rhythms, melodies and spirit with a touch of R&B/Soul to create a distinctive sound within Melbourne's growing musical climate.

The Word "Ceeko" is derived from an African dialect and means to be a great singer, dancer and performer — a name that CEEKO undoubtedly lives up to through his music and stage presence.

It was just before his high school graduation that CEEKO realised his true calling was music and he has never looked back. Ever since, he has been experimenting on the scene, battling down the long strenuous road, trying to define who he is as an artist.

Nevertheless, his ambition and passion for music never wavered.

On his musical journey, CEEKO has achieved many notable accolades. In particular, CEEKO proudly featured on Illstrd's massive track, 'Work Hard', which has notched up over 150,000 streams on Spotify alone. He also performed as guest vocalist on 'Houdini', from Spit Syndicate's 2017 album 'One good shirt had us fly'. He has worked with several other top grade artists as well including Remi, Billy Davis and the Good Lords and Tentendo.

Australia will not be ready for the inevitable takeover and will soon realise the amount of pure talent that exists within CEEKO that lays dormant no longer.
